PREFACE

FRANCIS BACON it was who said Prefaces are great wastes of time and tho they seem to proceed of modesty they are bravery. It is necessary however in the present instance to make a stand against the somewhat sweeping convictions of the Elizabethan master of Youth in India is a hot young call trumpeting down the ages through a maze of polytheistic tribute and emerging in the twentieth century with some of its original clearness of sound drowned by a Gargantuan thunder of Western The Indian poet of to-day is torn like the Indian painter between admiration for Western models and a desire to mould himself thereon, and an inherent Indian tradition that runs in his veins and will not be denied Indeed it is pity to deny it Sir Edmund Gosse persuaded Sarojim Naidu to tear up her poems about English life and to write of her own Indian bazaars and cities villages and festivals for which persuasion we are indeed indebted to Sir Edmund. We of the West do not want from of Yeats and Shelley and Walt Whitman We want genuine Taj Mahals and Juma Masjids, cameos of rural sweetness and the hopes of faithful hearts. We want to hear the flute of Krishna as Radha heard it, to fall under the spell of the blue god "in the lotus-heart of dreams". For there is much to learn from the melody of Eastern thought. It is, perhaps, a minor melody born of the mating of Love and Death, but it has its seed in an innate spiritual rapture that no Western veneer can wholly cover.

In the bulk of Indian poetry religious feeling predominates, as is only natural in a country of many but steadfast faiths

"To act, to think, to feel aright until He knows his will as one with Allah's will"

Subjugation of the Self leading to a merging of that Self with God India writes largely from the "Inner Vision" This disallows of foreign influence, but the poet is necessarily inspired as well by an everyday atmosphere which he enriches from the strength of his own perception. The steps of the bathing-ghâts in Calcutta may be of Sheffield cast-iron, but the country that could produce a Taj Mahal—"stone turned into a dream," D G Mukerji calls it—will never lose the innate artistic vision of her soul. So the creative prayers of this mighty cosmopolitan multitude surge upwards in a song of glory till they reach the stars. Love of life is love of art because life is art and art is life. We chase after fleeting perfection, a rosy cloud, a glint of eternity in a lily pool, a drop of dew trembling on a flower petal momenta of heaven in worlds of chaos. To catch a mood of Nature and transfer it to paper to wring from the heart of an instrument one swift emotional phase after another is it futile? It is it useless?

"Am I one of the trees in the night Or are the trees human beings?" asks Harindranath Chattopadhyays in one of his poems not published here cohoing the cry of

Li Po

"Chuang Chou in a dream became a butterfly
And the butterfly became Chuang Chon at waking a
Which was the real—the butterfly or the man?"

In Indian poetry the mystic element shines through the outer decorative aspect

Our dreams and longings cover deeper dreams. And longings in the allence far away "

We are roused from the beautiful lyrical lilt of Chattopadhyaya and of his sister Sarojini Naidu by the thunder of Muhammad Ipbal s persuasive eloquence He is a barrister-at-law at Lahore an active Moslem opposed to Platonic illusion and non progressive idealism

Plato, the prime sacotic and sage
Was one of that ancient flock of sheep
His Pegaras went astray in the darkness of philosophy
And galloped over the mountains of Being Hows so fascinated by the Ideal
That he made head, eye, and our of no account "

Whether one agrees with his outlook or not, the fact remains that one cannot fail to be stirred by the intensely fiery spirit of Iqbal's rhetorical writing He is a leader. He sweeps everything before him like a great wind swirling through a forest of pines He would re-create Islam, an active, non-Imperialistic, non-sensual Islam. In his own words, he is "the voice of the poet of To-morrow." As Mr R A Nicholson (his translator) says, the book "Asrar-1-Khudi (Secrets of the Self), from which I have taken the extracts, "presents certain obscurities which no translation can entirely remove" That is, of eourse, to European readers or to those not conversant with Persian poetry For the book was originally written in Persian

"Although the language of Hind is sweet as sugar, Yet sweeter is the fashion of Persian speech"

He is an inspiring philosopher.

"Thou art fire fill the world with thy glow! Make others burn with thy burning!

Up, and re-inspire every living soul !"

I have spoken of the Youth of India, but the contributors to this volume range in age from the twenties to the seventies. There is little need for me to speak of Rabindranath Tagore. Mr Edward Thompson (to whom I am indebted for the three translations) has acted in a Boswellian capacity, and the poet is as well known in England as are the great poets of our own nationality I would draw attention however, to the beautiful concluding lines of Urvasi'

On the night of full moon, when the world brims with laughter Memory from somewhere far away pipes a flute that brings unrest.

The team goah out t
Yet in that weeping of the spirit Hope wakes and lives;
Ah, Unfettered One 1 **

Ah, Unlettered One 1"
The flute-call of memory hringing restlessness and a strange peace on its liquid cadences. And a dimness of tears to stir the dust of Hope to life. Ah, Unfettered One!" I have included some translations of Indian songs as sung hy native singers because I thought they might be of interest from an indigenous point of view. Dr. Ananda Coomaraswamy of the Museum of Fine Arts Boston Mass is responsible for their Exclusive conductors. English rendering The one commencing Quietly come O Beauty come has a mystical meaning We drift then into the Punjab the Land of Five Waters and find Puran Singh the Sikh poet breathing the musk of God love through nostrils ever open to receive a spiritual fragrance

"The dew is falling everywhere

And wet is every rose. The gentle breath of heaven blows."

It blows the perfume of the Beauty that is Worship into the heart of this devout enthusiast His mind is a casket that holds the most precious gems of the Sikh religion and ideals and gives them forth to an unenlightened world Nanak, Gobind, Teg Bahadur, the names of the Ten Masters (whose lives he has written) sound in his ears day and night

The loneliness of exile rings through the quivering poems of Manmohan Ghose.

"Lost is that country, and all but forgotten 'Mid these chill breezes"

All true poets love trees, Manmohan Ghose is no exception

"Willow sweet, willow sad, willow by the river, Taught by pensive love to droop, where ceaseless waters shiver"

Mrs Pankajını Basu is represented by one poem, "Basanta Panchamı," a description of the famous Spring Festival One line, in particular, stands out "Ever sorrowful, ever ill-starred, are we women of Bengal, all of us," and, one might add, ever devout, ever faithful The eternal question of Indian womanhood cannot be dismissed with a shrug of the shoulders Mrs. Naidu's lines.

"What further need hath she of loveliness Whom Death hath parted from her lord's caress?"

seem to strike at the heart of the matter. Time alone will solve a problem which at the moment is very vexed indeed. It would seem almost that in their poems these Indian women express all the fullness of their hearts in love-songs, hymns of conjugal devotion, lamentations, praise of physical beauty and tributes of faith Emotional outlets of warm loyal natures yet always with the underlying sadness that is the birthright of Hind like an anthom at ovening or the oyes of a convent sister Melancholy glides like pearly vapour through The Island Grave" of Sri Anrohindo Ghoso

"And I will most thee in that lovely place
Then the groy dawn shall end my hateful days
And death admit me to the silent ways."

Death to the Oriental is a small and yet a great matter He welcomes rather than fears it body being but the shell of the soul is of little account save perhaps for its procreative value as a creator of further beings in the image of God Death then is a joyful thing and thore is hut a thin line between the wedding soug and tho funeral direct

The blue bird of truth is flying against a sky of such intense blueness as to be almost in distinguishable-Ananda Acharya s Indra. This poet sends his snow hlossoms of Indian thought forth from the cool earth of Norway He lives there smid his Swallows and in his later work has grafted Asian feeling in a curious way upon a shoot of Scandinavian origin There is of course strange affinity between the Nordio peoples and the Asian The strain flowed through Northern Russia south to Persia and thence into India, the type gradually changing from blue-cyed, fair-skinned folk to olive skins and "flaming eyes, like thunder skies So deep and dark ..."

Jehangir Jivan Vakil's three little poems have not hitherto been published. The one commencing "O long black hair of love" has an almost Japanese brevity, and compresses into four lines quite a wealth of ardent feeling

India is rich in legendary history and does not lack for romantic and dramatic episodes in her actual chronicles. I have, nevertheless, found little of the narrative style of poetry among the modern poets. Historical and legendary references are occasionally met with, but they are usually incidental, and little use has been made of a richly-equipped storehouse. Adi K Sett has utilised this method in "Roshanara," Inayat Khan in "Tansen," and Tagore (in a measure) in "Urvasi." Apparently the lyrical style or the sonnet-form has the greatest appeal.

Narayan Vaman Tilak was a Christian mystic His poems breathe all the fervour of the convert.

> "Saith Dasa, Christ, upon Thy pallet-bed Grant me a little space to lay my head"

I have included Zahir, Ghalib, and Amir, because, though not modern in a strict sense, as is, say, Fredoon Kabraji, they have been translated by living people, namely, Mrs J D Westbrook and Pir-o-Murshid Inayat Khan.

Whether this is the dawn time of a new era of Iodian poetic thought who shall say I. These Eastern singers Bengali Punjabi Himbu Moham medan Sikh, Christian have upon the ir shoulders a yoke of heavy responsibility. They have to support and become worthy of the mighty tradition that lies behind them. Song should be theirs naturally but it is one thing to preserve the metre in their own particular tongues and another to wrestle with the technicalities of Luglish. There are many more modern poets in India from whom I might have chosen but the scope of the book forbids the inclu ion of more material

The Indian (wilight descend gentle and swift wizard clocks ring out and rend the calm."
The dark rich blue of night periods studded swings a baby moon high above inky palm and gleaming tomb. The poet sits in contemp lation. The lotus dreams upon the latio melodies of

EDITORIAL NOTE

The object of the Editors of this series is a very definite one. They desire above all things that, in their humble way, these books shall be the ambassadors of good-will and understanding between East and West—the old world of Thought and the new of Action. In this endeavour, and in their own sphere, they are but followers of the highest example in the land. They are confident that a deeper knowledge of the great ideals and lofty philosophy of Oriental thought may help to a revival of that true spirit of Charity which neither despises nor fears the nations of another creed and colour

ANTHOLOGY OF MODERN INDIAN POETRY

AN INVOCATION

O Thou art as the soul in the body of the uni

Thou art our soul and Thou art ever fleeing from

Thou breathest music into Life s into Life envies Death when death is for thy sake Once more hing comfort to our sad hearts! Once more dwell in our breasts! Once more let us hear Thy cell to honour! Strengthen our weak love

We are oft complaining of destiny, Thou art of great price and we have naught Hide not Thy fair face from the empty handed I Sall cheap the love of Salman and Bilál I Give us the sleepless eye and the passionate heart!

Give us again the nature of quicksilver i Show unto us one of Thy manifest signs That the necks of our enemies may be bowed! Make this chaff a mountain crested with fire,

Burn with our fire all that is not God!

When the people let the clue of Unity go from their hands,

They fell into a hundred mazes

We are dispersed like stars in the world,

Though of the same family, we are strange to one another

Bind again these scattered leaves, .

Revive the law of love!

Take us back to serve Thee as of old,

Commit Thy cause to them that love thee!

We are travellers give us devotion as our goal!

Give us the strong faith of Abraham!

Make us know the meaning of "There is no god"! Make us acquainted with the mystery of "except Allah "!

I, who burn like a candle for the sake of others, Teach myself to weep like the candle

O God! a tear that is heart-enkindling,

Passionful, wrung forth by pain, peace-consuming,

May I sow in the garden, and may it grow into a fire

That washes away the firebrand from the tulip's robe!

My heart is with yestereve, my eye is on to-

Amidst the company I am alone.

"Everyone fancies he is my friend,

But my secret thoughts have not escaped from my heart '

O where in the wide world is my comrade ?

I am the Bush of Sinai where is my Moses ? I am tyrannous I have done many a wrong to myself

I have nourished a flame in my bosom A flame that seized the furniture of judgment And cast fire on the skirt of discretion And lessened with madness the reason And hurned up the existence of knowledge Its blaze enthrones the sun in the sky And lightnings encircle it with aderation for ever Mine eye fell to weeping like dew Since I was entrusted with that hidden fire I taught the candle to burn openly While I myself burned unseen by the world s

At last flames breathed from every hair of mo Fire dropped from the veins of my thought My nightingale picked up the spark-grains And created a fire-tempered song Is the breast of this age without a heart ? Majnún trembles lest Lailá s howdah be empty It is not easy for the candle to throb alone Ah I is there no moth worthy of me ? How long shall I wait for one to share my grief ? How long must I search for a confident !

O Thou whose face lends light to the moon and the stars.

Withdraw Thy fire from my soul!

Take back what Thou hast put in my breast,
Remove the stabbing radiance from my mirror,
Or give me one old comrade

To be the mirror of mine all-burning love!
In the sea wave tosses side by side with wave
Each hath a partner in its emotion.
In heaven star consorts with star,
And the bright moon lays her head on the knees of Night

Morning touches Night's dark side,
And To-day throws itself against To-morrow
One river loses its being in another,
A waft of air dies in perfume
There is dancing in every nook of the wine-house, Madman dances with madman Howbeit in Thine essence Thou art single,
Thou hast decked out for Thyself a whole world
I am as the tulip of the field,
In the midst of a company I am alone
I beg of Thy grace a sympathising friend,
An adept in the mysteries of my nature,
A friend endowed with madness and wisdom,
One that knoweth not the phantom of vain things,

That I may confide my lament to his soul And see again my face in his heart His image I will mould of mine own clay, I will be to him both idol and worshipper.

Muhammad Iqbal

THE SECRETS OF THE SELF

PROLOGUE

When the world illuming sun rushed upon Night like a brigand

My weeping bedewed the face of the rose

My tears washed away sleep from the eye of the naroissus.

My passion wakened the grass and made it grow The Gardener taught me to sing with power He sowed a verse and reaped a sword

In the soil he planted only the seed of my tears. And wove my lament with the garden, as warp took fire

The I am but a mote the radiant sun is mine Within my bosom are a hundred dawns My dust is brighter than Jamshid s oup

It knows things that are yet unborn in the world. My thought hunted down and slung from the saddle a deer

That has not yet leaped forth from the covert of non-existence

Fair is my garden ere yet the leaves are green Full blown roses are hidden in the skirt of my garment

I struck dumb the musicians where they were gathered together

I smote the heartstrings of all that heard me

Because the lute of my genius hath a rare melody: Even to comrades my song is strange.

I am born in the world as a new sun,

I have not learned the ways and fashions of the sky:

Not yet have the stars fled before my splendour, Not yet is my quicksilver astir; Untouched is the sea by my dancing rays, Untouched are the mountains by my crimson hue. The eye of existence is not familiar with me, I rise trembling, afraid to show myself From the East my dawn arrived and routed Night, A fresh dew settled on the rose of the world. I am waiting for the votaries that rise at dawn Oh, happy they who shall worship my fire! I have no need of the ear of To-day, I am the voice of the poet of To-morrow. My own age does not understand my deep meanings, My Joseph is not for this market.

I despair of my old companions,

My Sinai burns for sake of the Moses who is coming

Their sea is silent, like dew,
But my dew is storm-ridden, like the ocean
My song is of another world than theirs
This bell calls other travellers to take the road
How many a poet after his death
Opened our eyes when his own were closed,
And journeyed forth again from nothingness

When roses blossomed o er the earth of his grave i Albeit caravans have passed through this desert, They passed as a camel stope with little sound. But I am a lover loud crying is my faith The clamour of Judgment Day is one of my mulcos

My song exceeds the range of the chord Yet I do not fear that my lute will break. 'Twere better for the waterdrop not to know my torent

Whose fury should rather madden the sea
No river will contain my Oman
My flood requires whole seas to hold it
Unless the bud expand into a bed of roses
It is unworthy of my spring-cloud s bounty
Lightnings slumber within my soul,
I sweep over mountain and plain.
Wrestle with my sea if thou art a plain
Receive my lightning if thou art a Smai
The Fountain of Life hath been given me to drink,

I have been made an adept of the mystery of

Life
The speck of dust was vitalised by my burning

The speck of dust was vitalised by my burning song
It unfolded wings and became a firefly

No one hath told the secret which I will tell Or threaded a pearl of thought like mine Come if thou wouldst know the secret of ever lasting life! Come, if thou wouldst win both earth and heaven! The old Guru of the Sky taught me this lore, I cannot hide it from my comrades
O Saki! arise and pour wine into the cup,
Clear the vexation of Time from my heart!
The sparkling liquor that flows from Zemzem—Were it a beggar, a king would pay homage to it
It makes thought more sober and wise,
It makes the keen cye keener,
It gives to a straw the weight of a mountain,
And to foxes the strength of lions.
It causes dust to soar to the Pleiades
And a drop of water swell to the breadth of the

It turns silence into the din of Judgment Day, It makes the foot of the partridge red with blood of the hawk.

Arise and pour pure wine into my cup, Pour moonbeams into the dark night of my thought,

That I may lead home the wanderer And imbue the idle looker-on with restless impatience,

And advance hotly on a new quest

And become known as the champion of a new spirit,

And be to people of insight as the pupil to the eye, And sink into the ear of the world, like a voice, And exalt the worth of Poesy

And sprinkle the dry herbs with my tears.

Inspired by the genrus of the Master of Rum I rehearse the sealed book of secret lore His soul is the source of the flames I am but as the spark that gleams for a moment His burning candle consumed me the moth His wine overwhelmed my goblet The Master of Rum transmuted my earth to gold And clothed my barren dust with beauty The grain of sand set forth from the desert That it might win the radiance of the sun. I am a wave and I will come to rest in his sea That I may make the glistening pearl mine own I who am drunken with the wine of his song Will draw life from the breath of his words "Twas night my heart would fain lament. The silence was filled with my ories to God. I was complaining of the sorrows of the world And bewalling the emptiness of my oup At last mine eye could endure no more Broken with fatigue it went to aleep

There appeared the Master formed in the mould of Truth,

Who wrote the Koran of Persia He said 'O frenzied lover Take a draught of love s pure wine

Strike the chords of thins heart and rouse a tumultuous strain

Dash thine head against the cupping-glass and thine eye against the lancet !

Make thy laughter the source of a hundred sighs

Make the hearts of men bleed with thy tears!
How long wilt thou be silent, like a bud?
Sell thy fragrance cheap, like the rose!
Tongue-tied, thou art in pain
Cast thyself upon the fire, like rue!
Like the bell, break silence at last, and from every limb

Utter forth a lamentation!
Thou art fire fill the world with thy glow!
Make others burn with thy burning!
Proclaim the secrets of the old wine-seller,
Be thou a surge of wine, and the crystal cup thy robe!

Shatter the mirror of fear,
Break the bottles in the bazaar!
Like the reed-flute, bring a message from the reeds;
Give to Majnún a message from Lailá!
Create a new style for thy song,
Enrich the feast with thy piercing strains!
Up, and re-inspire every living soul!
Say 'Arise!' and by that word quicken the living!

Up, and set thy feet on another path, Put aside the passionate melancholy of old! Become familiar with the delight of singing, O bell of the caravan, awake!" At these words my bosom was enkindled And swelled with emotion like the flute, I rose like music from the string To prepare a Paradise for the ear.

I unveiled the mystery of the Self
And disclosed the wondrous secret.
My being was as an unfinished statue
Uncomely worthless good for nothing
Love chiselled ms I became a man And gained knowledge of the nature of the universe

I have seen the movement of the sinews of the sky And the blood coursing in the venies of the moon Many a night I wept for Man s sake. That I might tear the veil from Life s mysteries And extract the secret of Life s constitution From the laboratory of phenomena. I who give beauty to this night like the moon Am as dust in devotion to the pure Faith [Islam]—A Faith renowned in hill and dale

Which kindles in men s hearts a flame of undying

It sowed an atom and reaped a sun, it harvested a hundred poets like Ruml and Attar I am a sigh I will mount to the heavens I am a breath yet am I sprung of fire Driven onward by high thoughts my pen Cast abroad the secret of this veil, That the drop may become co-equal with the sea And the grain of sand grow into a Sahara Poetising is not the aum of this manner Beauty worshipping and love-making is not its aim.

I am of India Persian is not my native tongue song

I am like the crescent moon my cup is not full Do not seek from me charm of style in exposition, Do not seek from me Khansar and Isfahan Although the language of Hind is sweet as sugar, Yet sweeter is the fashion of Persian speech. My mind was enchanted by its loveliness, My pen became as a twig of the Burning Bush. Because of the loftiness of my thoughts, Persian alone is suitable to them O Reader, do not find fault with the wine-cup, But consider attentively the taste of the wine Muhammad Igbal

WORSHIP

You flood my music with your autumn silence And burn me in the flame-burst of your spring Lo! through 'my beggar-being's tattered garments

Resplendent shines your crystal heart, my King!

Like a rich song you chant your red-fire sunrise, Deep in my dreams, and forge your white-flame moon

You hide the crimson secret of your sunset, And the pure golden message of your moon.

You fashion cool-grey clouds within my body, And weave your rain into a diamond mesh. The Universal Beauty dances, dances. A glimmering peacock in my flowering flesh!

Harindranath Chattopadhyaya.

REYOND THE VERGE OF TIME

Our dreams and longings cover deeper dreams And longings in the silence far away All things on earth sweet winds and shining

Waters and stars and the love moods of men Are cool green cohoes of the voice that sings Beyond the verge of Time Between two cross of aucht

Of aught on earth wakes the eternal fire Wherein the destiny of heaven is wrought For what is heaven but the earth grown full, And God but man unshadowed and afar †

STEPS

EACH moment when we feel alone In this great world of rush and riot Is as a jewelled stepping-stone Which leads into the House of Quiet

Within it dwell the ancient seers
Beyond unreal grees and cares
Beyond unreal smiles and tears
Beyond the need of chant and prayers
Harındranath Chatiopadhyaya

EGO

A Beauty that ever eludes these fleshly eyes And fingers and lips. . Ere I can catch one gleam of the starry skies The mystery slips, Leaving an empty, desolate, mocking moan In the little heart that greedily sought to hold Vast beauty within its shadowy grasp and own Elusive, starry gold!

Who are you, feeble, shadow-robed elf, Striving again and again in vain to capture Wealth of the deep, the shining, ineffable rapture Which is the Self beyond self?

Harindranath Chattopadhyaya.

FIRE

KINDLE your glimmering lamp in the infinite space, O Love!

Let the dark shadows dance in the burning depths of mine eyes

I am athirst for one glimpse of your beautiful face, O Love!

Veiled in the mystical silence of stars and the purple of skies.

Thrill me with radiant rapture O Love! of your ravishing finte

Folding my silence in song and my sorrow in allyer colinse

Shaping my heart into flower and the flower of my heart into fruit

Meet for your orchards of light and touch of your luminous lips

Cast in the shadowy deeps of my being your love like a spark,

Fan it to magical flame till my dead heart burst into fire

Swing like a conser my dream of devotion O Love ! through the dark,

Turn into tumults of incense my richly pulsating desire t

Harındranath Chattopadhyaya

THE ARTIST

THE selfsame radiant costasy Which wrought the tempest a giant wrath Has painted gorgeous dream-designs So delicately on the moth The selfsame luminous agony Which shaped the lightning a flery claw Has carved in utmost tenderness A summer flower without a flaw

The selfsame motherhood which made
The awful mystery of death
Has built the body of a child
And lit its limbs with golden breath
The selfsame miracle which moves
In silent mystery apart
Has struck the secret melody
Which dances shyly in my heart

Harindranath Chattopadhyaya

IMAGERY

HE has fashioned the stars and the moons to the music

Of innermost-flowering joy and desire, He has tried his own love for himself through the ages

By flooding his limbs with unquenchable fire Of creation that dances and bubbles and flutters In peacocks, in seas, and the hearts of the birds Behind the rich silence of red-running sunsets And cool-coloured sundawns he utters his words

He is finding for ever his infinite fullness In blossoming buds and the withering flowers He shapes through the heart of the world his Ideal

So white in the midst of the many-hued hours He weaves a fine trammel of marvellous colours Around and about him in utter delight, Till straight through the darkness his laughter comes lambent

Birdlike from a cage m a freedom of flight

REVELATION

I have dreamt on many rain-dim eves

Beauty folded in the flowers and leaves
Spraying the grass with laughter as with light
Of shaken pearls that lit her hair's dark night
But never dreamed her eyes so deep might be
As those with which last eve you gazed at me

SPRING THAT IN MY COURTYARD

Spring that in my courtyard used to make Such riot once, and buzzing laughter lift, With heaped drift—
Pomegranate-flowers,
Kanchan, parul, rain of palas-showers,
Spring whose new twigs stirred the woods awake, With rosy kisses maddening all the sky, Seeks me out to-day with soundless feet,
Where I sit alone Her steadfast gaze
Goes out to where the fields and heavens meet, Beside my silent cottage, silently
She looks and sees the greenness swoon and die
Into the azure haze

THIS DAY WILL PASS

I know this day will pass,

This day will pass—

That one day, some day,

The dim sun with tender smiling

Will look in my face,

Looking his last farewell Beside the way the flute will sound,

¹ The new leaves are red, are the rosy kisses Also, palas and pomegranate both have red blossoms

² This poem deliberately takes off from the loveliest of all Bengali popular songs, Ramprasad's "This day will surely pass, this day will pass" (see Bengali Religious Lyrics, Thompson and Spencer, Oxford University Press)

The kine will graze on the river bank, The children will play in the courtyards,

The birds will sing on

Yet this day will pass This day will pass

This is my prayer

My prayer to Thee

That ere I go I may learn

Why the green Earth

Lifting her eyes to the sky

Called me to her

Why the silence of the Night Told me of the stars

Why the Day's glory

Raised waves in my soul.

This is my prayer to Thee

When Earth s revolutions For me are ended

In the finishing of my song

Let me pause a moment

That I may fill my basket

With the flowers and fruits of the Six Seasons 1

That in the light of this life I may see Thee in going

That I may garland Thee in going

With the garland from my own throat— When Earth's revolutions for me are ended Rabindranath Tagore.

URVASI 1

Thou art not Mother, art not Daughter, art not Bride!

Thou beautiful, comely One, O Dweller in Paradise, Urvasi!

When Evening descends on the pastures, drawing about her tired body her golden cloth,

Thou lightest the evening lamp within no home With hesitant, wavering steps, with throbbing breast and downcast look.

Thou dost not go, smiling, fearful, to any beloved's bed,

In the hushed midnight Like the rising Dawn, thou art unveiled, Unshrinking One !

Urvasi, in older (* e Sanskrit) mythology, is a famous courtesan and dancing-girl at the court of Indra, King of the Gods Her adventures were many, she was often sent to lure sages aside from their devotions, lest they obtained super divine powers and threatened the dominion of the Gods (see stanza 4) But in Tagore's poem she is very much more than her legendary character. The poem is a tangle—Indian mythology, modern science, European romance. She is the cosmic spirit of life, in the mazes of its eternal dance, she is Beauty dissociated from all human relationships, she is that world enchanting Love which (though not in Dante's sense) "moves the sun and other stars," is Lucretius's hominum divumque voluptas, Alma Venus, is Swinburne's "perilous goddess," "sea foam born."

I have adopted a quasi-metrical form which I hope will indicate the general outline of the stanza in which this magnificent ode is written

Like some stemless flower blooming in thyself When didst thou blossom Urvasi ?

That primal Spring thon didst arise from the churning of Ocean

In thy right hand nectar venom in thy left

The swelling mighty Sca like a serpent tamed with spells

Drooping his thousand towering hoods

Fell at thy feet !

White as the kunda, blossom a naked beauty adored by the King of Gods

Thou flawless One I

Wast thou never bud never maiden of tender

O eternally youthful Urvasi † Sitting alone under whose dark roof Didst then know childhood's play toying with gems and pearls ?

At whose side in some chamber lit with the flashing of gems

Lulled hy the chant of the sea waves didst thou skeep in coral bed

A smile on thy pure face ?

J. When the Gods churned the Ocean, to recover the lost nectar of immortality. Urvest first appeared one of nectar of immortality. Urvest first appeared one of nectar came out poison, which threatened the life of all creatures, till Sirs drank it to save the worlds. Tagore has invented Urvasi's responsibility for the nectar and poison being brought forth; at any rats, I know of no other authority for line 4 of this stanza.

44 MODERN INDIAN POETRY

That moment when thou awakedst into the universe, thou wast framed of youth, In full-blown beauty!

From age to age thou hast been the world's beloved,

O unsurpassed in loveliness, Urvasi!

Breaking their meditation, sages lay at thy feet the fruits of their penance,

Smitten with thy glance, the three worlds 1 grow restless with youth,

The blinded winds blow thine intoxicating fragrance around,

Like the black bee, honey-drunken, the infatuated poet wonders, with greedy heart,

Lifting chants of wild jubilation!

While thou . . thou goest with jingling anklets and waving skirts, Restless as lightning!

In the assembly of Gods, when thou dancest in ecstasy of joy,

O swaying Wave, Urvasi!

The companies of billows in mid-ocean swell and dance, beat on beat,

In the crests of the corn the skirts of Earth tremble,

¹ In Sanskrit mythology, heaven, the atmosphere, and earth, in later mythology, generally heaven, earth, and the underworld

From thy necklace stars fall off in the sky Suddenly in the breast of man the heart forgets itself

The blood dances I Suddenly in the horizon thy zone hursts Ab wild in abandon l

On the Sunrise Mount of Heaven thou art the embodied Dawn

O world-enchanting Urvasi !

The alimness of thy form is washed with the tears of the Universe

The ruddy hue of thy feet is painted with the heart a blood of the three worlds ,

Thy tresses disrobed from their braid thou hast placed thy light feet

Thy lotus feet on the lotus of the blossomed Desires of the universe i

Endless are thy masques in the mind's heaven O Comrado of dreams I

Ah hear what crying and weeping everywhere rises for thee

O cruel, deaf Urvasi i

Ah will that Ancient Primo ever revisit this earth 1

From the shoreless unfathemed deep wilt then ever rise again, with wet locks ?

First in the First Dawn that Form will show !

In the startled gaze of the universe all thy limbs will weep,

The waters flowing from them!

Suddenly the vast Sea, in songs never heard before,

Will thunder with its waves!

She will not return, she will not return! That Moon of Glory has set,

She has made her home on the Mount of Setting, has Urvasi!

Therefore to-day, on earth, with the joyous breath of Spring

Mingles the long-drawn sigh of some eternal separation!

On the night of full moon, when the world_brims with laughter,

Memory, from somewhere far away, pipes a flute that brings unrest,

The tears gush out!

Yet in that weeping of the spirit Hope wakes and lives,

Ah, Unfettered One!

Rabindianath Tagore

¹ In Indian mythology, there are Mounts of Sunrise and Sunsetting

OPEN THOU THY DOOR OF MERCY

ALL my guilt of old sin upon sin, put far, far away Give O Lord give in my heart the melody of a new song

To stir to life my withered unfeeling heart near to death and poor play thy melody on the bind taking ever a new tune

As in Nature thy sweetness overflows so let thy compassion wake in my heart

In the midst of all things may thy loving face float before my eyes. May no robel thought against thy wish ever wake in my heart

Day by day before I set foot in life's forcet may I crave thy blessing and so advence my Lord.

Setting thy commands upon my head may I with unfaltering care accomplish my every task

m the remembrance of thy feet Giving to thee the fruit of my task fulfilled

at the end of day may my weared spirit and body find rest

Hurrying have I come from far away knowing thee compessionate A hundred hindrances there were to my coming How many thorns fill the path to my goal. So to-day behold I my heart is wounded my life is dark. Hurrying have I come from far away knowing thee compessionate

Open thou thy door of mercy. My raft of life drifts on the boundless ocean Fearlessness art thou, and ever powerful Nought have I, I am weak and poor My heart is thirsting for thy lotus feet The day is now far spent Open thou thy door of mercy. My raft of life drifts on the boundless ocean.1

THE DANCER

Lo! the heavy rain has come! With loosened tresses densely dark, lo! the sky is covered. Lightnings rend the thick darkness over the mountains All around, to my heart's content, I see that beauty has burst forth

See, frolicsome, she pours forth her loveliness in a thousand streams! Her raiment, hastily flung around her in disarray, mad passion in her eyes, with the voice of the pāpiyā, full of sweetness and pity, she sings

Slowly move her feet Slipping, slipping, falls her loosely hanging scarf Her heart throbs with tumultuous feeling As if a flood of beauty overflows, her green jacket of emerald grass displays the hue of her radiant beauty all around The anklets on her feet, keeping time, ring out in swift succession as if they were sweet cymbals. Round her lovely throat haugs her chain of emerald parrots. The rain has ceased and she garbs herself in silken robes hroidered with diamond raindrops.

1 From the Mādhabi

She gladdens the oye On the trectops hirds play on golden tambourines. Is the dancer dancing in Indras hall, casting restless glances here and there ! Urbas! puts off the chain of jewels from her hreast

How gav her laughter! How fair a dance her tinkling footstops weare! Her hencelets and bangles circle glittering She is girdled with melody of murmuring swans For her earth and sky swoon away overflowing with love

Her hands touched the bind: and by her spell enthralled my infatuated heart. Tears stream from my oyes infatuation floods my heart. The witch to-day has melted my timid heart. Lo! the heavy rain has come

THE VISIBLE

Dearest, I know that thy body is but transitory, that the kindled life, thy shining eyes, shall be quenched by the touch of death, I know, that this thy body the meeting place of all beauty in seeing which I count my life well lived shall become but a heap of hones I know Yet I love thy body. Day by day afresh through it hove I satisfied a woman a love end desire hy serving thy feet and worshipping thee. On days of good omen I have decked thee with a flower-garland on days of woo I hove wiped away with my sari end thy tears of graef. On my lord I know that thy soul is with the Ever lasting One yet waking suddenly some nights I have wept in loneliness thinking how thou didst drive oway my fear clasping me to thy hreast. IN THE LIGHT

² From the Patralekha

WE are indeed children of Light What an endless mart goes on in the Light! In the Light is our sleeping and waking the play of our life and death

Beneath one great canopy in the ray of one great sun slowly very slowly burn the un numbered lamps of life

In the midst of this unending Light I lose

We are indeed children of Light. Why then do we fear when we see the Light? Come, let us look all around and see, here no man hath cause for any fear

In this boundless ocean of Light, if a tiny lamp goes out, let it go, who can say that it will not burn again?

CALL AND BRING HER

SHE went on the wrong way, she has come back again, afar off she stands, her head bowed down with shame and fear, she does not step forward, she cannot raise her eyes—go near, take her hand, call her and bring her

To-day turn not your face away in silent reproach, to-day let eyes and words be filled with the nectar of love What good will come from pouring scorn on the past? Think of her dark future, take her by the hand and bring her

Lest for lack of love this shamed soul fling away repentance, bring her, call and bring her She has come to give herself up, bind her fast with loving arms, if she goes to-day, what if she never comes again?

By one day's neglect, one day's contempt and anger you will lose a life for ever Do you not purpose to give life! heglect is a poisoned arrow with sorrowing pardon bring her call and bring her

THOUGHTS

When midnight hours know not the peace of aleep

But drudge in trembling hope for envied fame

In ghostly solitude before a flame Of glimmering light whose sombre rays out-peep To view the city wrapped in silence deep

Midst weird and darkly waving groves of palm

When wizard clocks ring out and rend the calm

With strides of Time—their thrilling voices creep Along the soul, my mind with labour worn,

Or grappling with a knot, delights to stand In stillness, yearning forth to clasp with love Thy beauteous form—and then, Spring opes above!

With blossom'd flow'r and chirping bird, the land

Smiles 'neath the sunlit hues the heavens adorn! P Seshadri

A BLUE DREAM

Whene her two lips
Meet or part
Leaps all my heart
Like the swift ship s
Lurch on the lucent wave—
Past peril and the grave!

Where her two oyes open or close Upon the rose kissed enews Of her face From my soul doth rise Of its grace A white star in their skies !

But if she smile Or weave of her mouth a word, Swiftly a light steals Half my mind, while Her word falls all unheard!
And a blue mist reels
Half curtaining my mind,
As a blue dream reels
In the heart of the blind
Circling a remembrance
Of meadows and streams,
Of blossoms that open and lights that dance,
And passions that struggle to live in dreams!

TULIP

TULIP, tell me, what do you hold in your cup? I hold in my cup the magic that swells the thirst of your soul, O Mother, when you look on the form of your child, the opiate that fills your dream, Mother, with the awe of the Unknown!

But, Tuhp, tell me, why do you guard your magic beyond the wing of melody?

Because, ere Thought was, a kiss of Love did capture Death in the Seed of Life That is why no melody of Life can hold all the magic in my cup, Mother, that is why Love cannot hold your child in Life alone!

INDIA-ENTERTAINING TWILIGHT

To India's comely cottage Twilight hied Salam my lass! resplendent Twilight cried A sumptuous fare prepare! since noon I tried To come this way but ah! the glowing day did stav

With thee ! Fresh milk and fried chapatis bring,

Do not forget thy hubble-bubble. dear,

For lots of dreamy cheer!

From out thy hair the withered hly fling,

Don fine array, with pearls thy tresses lay, and play

Thy vīnā, dance and sing!

One stolen hour is mine, that little while

With haunting notes of suri-raag beguile

And let me see thy flaming eyes, as thunder skies So deep and dark, with mystic lightnings bright,

With 'Duhals' wake what slumbering hes, the past let rise

All vesterdays to pageant gay, invite

Be swift, my sweet !

The meat and chutney let us eat

The hour, my sweet,

Is fleet, from night I must retreat!

Already muezzin's mellow call resounds in mango grove,

And temple bells, that wake the gods, the hearts to worship move,

Come hither, dear! The moments flee!

Salam, my love, Salam!"

And India, sun-burnt India, sweetly blushed,

INDIA-ENTERTAINING TWILIGHT 63

Salam I I'll hasten I answered she and hmahed

From off her braid the faded lily-crushed By day's embrace she sped, with joy her face a blaza

To milk the goats to fry the cakes in ghee Cabob pullan the dates and honey brought And hubble-bubble sought

With smiles of Sindian hospitality

With peri-grace she soared about the place to trace

Each thing that added glee

To Twilight a hour a rich repeat she spread Before her guest who sliced the mangoes red Neath palms boside the well and stream his eyes a gleam

With dusk, he watched where night in forests hid

And vexed with prymg silver beam his crimson dream

While India humming low her braids undid.

With rustling sound Unbound, her tresses sought the ground

With silvery sound

She wound her pearls in orient found

Her silk-apparel pasmin-decked kassed rups of golden cloth

With henne d hands she swirled her veil, as frail as wings of moth

Her vina struck with bended knee

"Salam," she quoth.

She shot as lightning up . then paused and smiled.

Then round she spun in trance, as dervish wild, In rainbow hue she flew, with flowers piled,

A flame a-whirl, with passion red, each curl a-twirl.

As Indra's temple-dancer, maddening hearts Her lips with kisses scarlet !—Eyes aglow Now moved she slv and slow

As Punjab tigress ere for prey she starts
Then did unfurl a smock as white as pearl a girl

Of pious Southern parts

She turned, gazellean-soft and meek her glance,

The rosary and censer graced her dance,

A fragrant bud of womanhood, divinely good,
But soon her measure ceased with rhythmic thrill

In Delhi's wealth arrayed she stood, in soaring mood

Then danced again, to show her perfect skill!

With flourish bold

And gold a-flash, now anklets told,

Her footsteps bold

Controlled a battle march of old!

She forward dashed as amazon of Rajput's desert side,

INDIA-ENTERTAINING TWILIGHT 65

Her eyes with valour all a-flame so proudly did she stride Wah! Wah! so Twinght cheered and she

Salam replied 'Salam !

Her Jadoo-veil now changed the scene and lo! In clouds she danced thro Kashmeer's mountain

Thro jungle glooms and tombs of gold below By Ganges led, where orehards blossoms shed, she sped

Mid Kools as Gopi, or as Rama's queen
With shimmering ivory limbs and rubied brow
As Moghul princess now
She sat mid slaves on throne of Jaspor sheen Now made her bed on elephant's broad head, and fled

As Jin thro plantains green.

Then rose as butterfly from out her shawl All persed o er lucid lakes of Taj Mahal.—

The hour had slipped, and night at last approached so fast

And Twilight douned his turban chilled with fright

The hookah-stick, he dropped aghast and India cast

Her jewelled elipper at her guardian Night Who gently sailed And trailed the stars but Twilight quailed And westward sailed! All veiled in mists he drooped and paled! Her lacquered cradle India spread for moonlit night to rest,

Namaskar made with folded hands! . . . half serious, half a-jest,

She fibbered. "Twilight hit at thee... Salam, my best

ROSHANARA

The Queen Roshanara is sad and weeps in the absence of her lord in battle. Her maidens strive to comfort her.

With this, to the couch
Whereon lay the Queen, so shaken
With voices she heard
And dreams she dreamt
And visions she saw
To her they brought rose-petals
In their hands, and musks in baskets, Perfuming her But she was Terror-stricken still Then with a wild clash of Tambourines they fell to An air of joyous happiness,

Sweetly soared the voice Like that of a nightingale Of the chief maiden who Sang of the wind

'North wind and south wind,
West wind and east wind
Thou shalt not mean
But-blow blow
Gently on my Lady's cheeks, blow
And thou O great sea
Thou shalt not wall,
But sweetly lull my Lady to sleep

'Red leaf and green leaf and all ye withered leaves
Ye shall not turn the lawns into a wildsmess
For my Lady is ead
And to see ye thus would make her sadder still Great trees and small trees
Ye shall not shake and shiver
When my Lady walks
But ye shall serve her as a good shade

Great hirds and small birds and all ye humming birds
Ye shall not wall mourning elegies
But shall twitter and your little throats shall quiver
In an eastasy of delight. Ye shall sing of sweet joy, Ye shall make my Lady happy.

"And ye Fairies and Cherubs, Ye Queens of the Dreams,
And Kings of the Shadows,
Of the hidden people and the Unknown,
Ye shall not approach my Lady,
For her heart sinks with fright,
And she trembles like a leaf
That is thrown from the branches
With the wind's force
All ye unknown, be banished
From my Lady, to your land
Of Mystery and Heart's Desire,
To your land of Eternal Youth."

Loud on the sleep of thy forgotten Kings
Who in thine arms sought Life's last resting place

DIRGE

(In sorrow of her bescavement)

What longer need hath she of loveliness, Whom Death has parted from her lord's caress? Of glimmering robes like rainbow-tangled mist, Of gleaming glass or jewels on her wrist, Blossoms or fillet-pearls to deck her head, Or jasmine garlands to adorn her bed?

Put by the mirror of her bridal days. . . Why needs she now its counsel or its praise, Or happy symbol of the henna leaf For hands that know the comradeship of grief, Red spices for her lips that drink of sighs, Or black collyrium for her weeping eyes?

Shatter her shining bracelets, break the string Threading the mystic marriage-beads that ching Loth to desert a sobbing throat so sweet, Unbind the golden anklets on her feet, Divest her of her azure veils and cloud Her hving beauty in a living shroud

Nay, let her be! what comfort can we give
For joy so frail, for hope so fugitive?
The yearning pain of unfulfilled delight,
The moonless vigils of her lonely night,
For the abysmal anguish of her tears,
And flowering springs that mock her empty years?

Sarojini Naidu.

O er fields of rice
Athwart the lotus-stream
I bring for you
Aglint with dew
A little lovely dream,

Sweet shut your eyes, The wild fire-flies

72 MODERN INDIAN POETRY

Dance through the fairy neem, From the poppy-bole For you I stole A little lovely dream.

Dear eyes, good-night,
In golden light
The stars around you gleam,
On you I press
With soft caress

JUNE SUNSET

Here shall my heart find its haven of calm, By rush-fringed rivers and rain-fed streams That glimmer thro' meadows of lily and palm. Here shall my soul find its true repose Under a sunset sky of dreams Diaphanous, amber, and rose. The air is aglow with the glint and whirl Of swift wild wings in their homeward flight, Sapphire, emerald, topaz, and pearl, Afloat in the evening light

A brown quail cries from the tamarisk bushes, A bulbul calls from the cassia-plume, And thro' the wet earth the gentian pushes Her spikes of silvery bloom. Where er the foot of the bright shower passes Fragrant and fresh delights unfold The wild fawns feed on the scented grasses Wild bees on the cactus-gold.

An ox-cart stumbles upon the rocks
And a wistful music pursues the breeze
From a shepherd s pipe as he gathers his flocks
Under the pipal trees
And a young Banjara driving her cattle Lufts up her voice as she glitters by
In an ancient ballad of love and battle
Set to the beat of a mystic tune
And the faint stars gleam in the eastern sky
To herald a using moon.

BUNKIM CHANDRA CHATTERJI

How hast thou lost O month of honey and flowers

The voice that was thy soul! Creative showers
The outkoo s daylong cry and moan of bees
Zephyrs and streams and tender blossoming trees
And murmuring laughter and heart-caning tears
And tender thoughts and great and the compeers
Of lily and jamine and meledious birds,
All these thy children into lovely words
He changed at will and made soul moving books
From hearts of men and women's honeyed looks

O master of delicious words! the bloom
Of champak and the breath of king-perfume
Have made each musical sentence with the noise
Of women's ornaments and sweet household joys
And laughter tender as the voice of leaves
Playing with vernal winds The eye receives,
That reads these lines, an image of delight,
A world with shapes of spring and summer, noon and night,

All nature in a page, no pleasing show But men more real than the friends we know. O plains, O hills, O rivers of sweet Bengal, O land of love and flowers, the spring-bird's call And southern wind are sweet among your trees Your poet's words are sweeter far than these. Your heart was this man's heart Subtly he knew The beauty and divinity in you His nature kingly was and as a god In large screnity and light he trod His daily way, yet beauty, like soft flowers Wreathing a hero's sword, ruled all his hours. Thus moving in these iron times and drear, Barren of bliss and robbed of golden cheer, He sowed the desert with ruddy-hearted rose, The sweetest voice that ever spoke in prose.

Sri Aurobindo Ghose

A ROSE OF WOMEN

Now lilies blow upon the windy height
Now flowers the pansy kissed by tender rain
Narcissus builds his house of self-delight
And Love s own fairest flower blooms again
Vainly your gems O meadows you recall
One simple girl breathes sweeter than you all.

THE ISLAND GRAVE

OGEAN is there and evening the slew mean Of the blue waves that like a shaken robe Two heard together once one hears alone

Now gliding white and hushed towards our globe

Keen January with cold eyes and clear And anowdrops pendent in each frosty lobe

Ushers the firstborn of the radiant year
Haply his feet that grind the breaking mould,
May brush the dead grass on thy secret bier

Haply his joyless fingers wan and cold Caress the ruined masses of thy hair Pale child of winter dead ere youth was old Art thou so desolate in that bitter air
That even his breath feels warm upon thy face?
Ah! till the daffodil is born, forbear,

And I will meet thee in that lonely place, Then the grey dawn shall end my hateful days And death admit me to the silent ways Sri Aurobindo Ghose.

INVITATION

With wind and the weather beating round me
Up to the hill and the moorland I go Who will come with me? Who will climb with me?

Wade through the brook and tramp through the snow?

Not in the petty circle of cities

Cramped by your doors and your walls I dwell;

Over me God is blue in the welkin,

Against me the wind and the storm rebel

I sport with solitude here in my regions,
Of misadventure have made me a friend.
Who would live largely? who would live freely?
Here to the wind-swept uplands ascend

I am the lord of tempest and mountain, I am the Spirit of freedom and pride Stark must be be and a kinsman to danger Who shares my kingdom and walks at my side Srs Aurobindo Ghose.

EVENING

A GOLDEN evening, when the thoughtful sun Rejects its usual pomp in going, trees That bend down to their green companion

And fruitful mother, vaguely whispering—these And a wide silent sea. Such hour is nearest God, Like rich old age when the long ways have all been trod.

Sri Aurobindo Ghose

THE SEA AT NIGHT

The grey sea creeps half-visible, half-hushed,
And grasps with its innumerable hands
These silent walls I see beyond a rough Glimmering infinity, I feel the wash
And hear the sibilation of the waves
That whisper to each other as they push
To shoreward side by side—long lines and dim
Of movement flecked with quivering spots of foam,

The quiet welter of a shifting world Sii Aurobindo Ghose.

LACHHI

From a well-known Panjābī folk-song

AHA! When Lachhi spills water, Spills water, spills water, There sandal grows—where Lachhi spills water. Aha! Lachh asks the girls
The girls the girls the girls
Oh what coloured veil suits a fair complexion ?

Aha! The girls said truly
Said truly said truly
A yeil that is black becomes a fair complexion

What then your fortune Lachhi †
Your fortune Lachhi your fortune Lachhi † fortune Lachhi †

Ho! your boy like the moon what then your fortune?

Who'll give you milk to drink, Lachhi ! Drink Lachhi, drink Lachhi ! Your friendship with the goetherds is sundared! Who'll give you milk to drink!

AZME

Note—The story goes that Gam wrote the song about a girl of Kntahar (a village in the Marar pargana of Kāshmīr) named Armē and that it became the occasion of trouble for its author Complaints were made about Gam, and his father reported the matter to the Tah sildar of the district but the poet explained that Azmē meant "to-day" and that the whole song had only a Sufī significance.

Azmē, love of thee came to me, fortunate vision! Azmē, show me thy face, O darling

Azmē, love of thee, etc.

Say where shall I wait, in Shangas or Naugam ² An ill name I got in Kutahar!

Azmē, love of thee, etc.

I sought thee in Achhaval, Brang, Kutahār—Lakhs of hardships I suffered, my darling

Pomegranate thy cheeks, or saza-posh—How dark are thine eyes, my darling!

Shining thy brows as though with sweat—How many a one thy nose has slain, my darling!

Sitting by the door, choosing saffron flowers, I know not for whom, my darling!

What a famous spinning-wheel is there in Kolgām, Matchless its handle, my darling!

Silver are the strings of thy spinning-wheel, Those who see it fall ill with wonder, my darling! Skilfully pounding the rice so fine. The good shape of the cypress has Azme, my darling I

Bright is her dress as a pearl. Short are the plants of Azme my darling !

Slowly combing her hair so fine-I will count up thy plaits my darling !

Kamader has passed through Kutahar All folk to him must yield (1), my darling !

Hapless Mahmud where shall he wait for thee ? An ill name I won in Kutahār my darling l Mahmud Gami

MYSTIC LOVE SONG FROM THIRTY INDIAN SONGS

Quielly come, O Beauty come!
O! oups of wine I'll fill for thee
Come to our house O Beauty come Come as a guest O Beauty come
Quielly come O Beauty come!

Borders twain thy veil adorn; At early dawn, O Beauty, rise— Quietly come, O Beauty, come '

A silken border thy veil adorns, Father has sent thee a cradle of bells—Quietly come, O Beauty, come!

Hast thou come from the heavens, O lovely bird? Wilt come by thyself, or a snare shall I spread? Quietly come, O Beauty, come!

He who made this golden bracelet, Was he only a goldsmith and never a master of craft ?

Quietly come, O Beauty, come!

The clouds have stopped their thunder
The lightning has hidden her spark,
The floods of the Punjab rivers have rolled away
The rivers have shrunk low

And wet is overy rose
The gentle breath of heaven blows

The season of the happy meetings of love,
The season of the quenching of all fires of pain.
To me everything seems to be dew-wet;
From the blue of heaven the dew is falling soft;
It is the dew of deep, deep unions;
And wonder and worship is in the eyes.
The separated ones shall meet!

RAJHANS (THE PRINCE OF SWANS)

RAJHANS! The Golden Swan! Is it thy plumage that shines or the sunrise on the eternal snows!

The dweller of Man-Sarcuar the lake on the roof of the world! Thy golden beak parts milk from water in the living stream thou art a liberated soul!

A rosary of spotless pearls is in thy beak, and how sublime is the lofty curve of thy neck against the Heaven s vast azuro!

Thou livest on pearls the nectar drops so pure of Hari Nam

Great Soul! lover of the azure transparent Infinite! Thou canst not breathe out of the Man-Sarowar air nor canst thou live out of sight of those leftiest peaks of snow and away from the diluted perfume of musk blowing from the wild trail of the deer!

Thou art the spirit of Beauty thou art far beyond the reach of human thought Thy isolation reflecteth the glory of the starry sky in thy Nectar Lake of Heart in whose waters the sun daily dips himself!

Thou hast the limitless expanse of air, the companionship of fragrant gods,

And yet we know thou leavest those Fair Abodes to come to share the woes of human love.

Thou alightest unawares on the grain-filled barn of the humble farmer, awakening Nature's maiden hearts, thou informest love

It is thy delight to see woman love man, the small ripplings of a human heart in love flutter thee in thy lofty seat.

Thou art the soul liberated through love, thou knowest the worth of love, flying for its sake even midst the cities' smoke and dust, perchance, to save a human soul through love!

SHAPELY poplar, shivering white, poplar like a maiden,

Thinking, musing softly here, so light and so unladen,

That with every hreath and stir perpetually yon gladden Teach me your still secrecies of thought that

Teach me your still secrecies of thoug never sadden

From the heavy hearted earth earth of grief and passion

Maiden would you spring with me and leave men s lowly fashion

Skyward lift with me your thoughts in oumberless elation

Every leaf and every shoot a virgin aspiration

The blue day the floating clouds the stars shall you for palace

Proffer their cathedral pomp dawn her rosy chalice

Where the birds are you shall throng and revel to be lonely

In the blue of heaven to spire and sway with

In the blue of heaven to spire and sway with hreezes only

Beech of leafy isles the queen beech of trees the lady

Soaring to a tower of sighs in hranches soft and shady You that sunward lift your strength, to make of shadow duty

Teach me tree your heavenly height and

Teach me tree your heavenly height and earth remembering beauty Maiden, would you soar like me, with dayupclouding tresses,

Beauty into bounty change, bend down the eye that blesses,

Make from heaven a shelter cool, to shepherd and sheep silly

Shadowing with shadiness, hot rose and fainting hly

Through your glorious heart of gloom, the noonday wind awaking

In an ecstasy shall set swaying, blowing, shaking,

Leafy branches, in their nests set the sweet birds rocking

Till their happy song break out, the noonday ardour mocking.

Willow sweet, willow sad, willow by the river, Taught by pensive love to droop, where ceaseless waters shiver,

Teach me, steadfast sorrower, your mournful grace of graces;

Weeping to make beautiful the silent water-places.

Maiden, would you learn of me the loveliness of mourning,

Droop into the chill, wan wave, strength, hardness, lofty scorning,

POPLAR BEECH, AND WILLOW 93

Drench your drooping soul in tears content to love and languish Gaze in sorrow s looking-glass, and see the face

In the very wash of woe as your bowed soul shall linger

You shall touch the sheer bright stars and on the moon set finger You shall hear where brooks have hirth the

ORPHIC MYSTERIES THE YELLOW RUTTERFLY

Or all shy visitants I love That darling butterfly

That darling butterily
Whose wings are to the cornfield a wave

A hovering reply
Yellow as dancing wheat-ears ripe

He suns with his gay youth, And feeds me with the gold of light The thrico-tried gloam of truth

When glooming back upon myself The garden path I pace

He comes and makes my gladdened eyes The dial to his grace Unfailing omen, punctual sign!
No sooner am I out,
He hovers by on golden wings
To chase the grey of doubt.

All melancholy thoughts to thresh,*
Winnow the blissful grain
Of immortality, and sift
From mortal fear and pain.

Day after day the marvel grows;
Ever his gladsome morn
Shines down the blackness of my grief
With glancing wings of scorn

Now from the creeper's bowery height, Now o'er the garden wall; From far-off places, or where first The wonder did befall

In that low bed of coxcomb flowers

Beneath her window-sill,

Her chamber-window, where he warms

Homeward my spirit still,

Or plumb-down from the soaring roof He to my awful eye His radiant message angels me From azure depths of sky. I cannot with ungrateful heart Feel God s fair world a hlank. Straight for the sunny thought of her His yellow wings I thank.

I cannot still he'r sight to want
Weep like a thwarted boy
Cry outright hut with darting gold
He chides me hack to joy

The stupor of the miracle
Ever renewed the fear
I lose in charmed tranquility
For she my saint is here

Who works it 1 No dead relic sweet Of her my living saint Perfect beyond the skill of thought Of fancy's power to paint

Whole from her suffering martyrdom She is arisen No tomh Could hold her no far hlissful heaven Allure Her heaven is home

No place more holy than these walks This garden where the flowers Swing censers breathing up to God This house a Book of Hours No room but memory's sacred hand, Gilded, illuminate, Paints how she suffered, loved and died— The legend of her fate.

In heaven she is; beatitude
To her; her loved ones still,
So loving she, here, here, enskyed
To guard It is God's will.

Here in the old sweet home where, still A guardian spirit, she Heals, comforts, counsels, and performs Her angel ministry

MYVANWY

Off hast thou heard it, that old true saying, 'Tis like and unlike makes the happiest music. Then, gravely smiling, scorn me not, Myvanwy, Fairest of maidens

Thou who in sunlight sittest, pensive leaning At the open window, thy hand deep-buried In dark sweet clusters of thy hair, and gazest O'er the wide ocean

Yes, o'er the ocean far, far in the distance, Is my own country, and other soil bore me Than thy dear hirthplace other sun than England s Nourished my spirit

Yet for this slight not my heart as alien What can green England show to match those regions

Save thyself only what hath she that merits

Prouder remembrance ?

Nothing I nor any shore that hears the Ocean Nothing can match their beauty I If Myvanwy Had but an exile s and heart in her bosom She too would say so

She too would say so and back in thought returning How would her sweet eves fill with tears of glad ness

How would she marvel the lovely maiden
Breathless with gazing 1

There stretching lonely do the giant mountains Rise with their ages of snows to heaven

Shows, the heart shudders so far away seem they Fearfully lovely

There is the tall palm like her own dear stature. The land s green lady and riotously hang there, all for Myvanwy s hps the strange, delicious.

Fruits of the tropics.

And the vast elephant that dreams for ages, Lost among dim leaves and things of old, remembers

Would he not, rousing at her name's sweet rumour,

Pace to behold her?

Oh me! what glories would her eyes enkindle, Eyes with their quick imaginative rapture! How shall I picture to her all the strangeness, All the enchantment,

In that enchanted land of noon? My heart faints

And my tongue falters for long ago, Myvanwy, Deep in the east where now but evening gathers,

Lost is my country.

Long ago hither in passionate boyhood, Lightly an exile, lightly leagues I wandered Over the bitter foam—so far Fate led me Only to love thee

Lost is that country, and all but forgotten 'Mid these chill breezes, yet still, oh, believe me, All her meridian suns and ardent summers

Burn in my bosom.

BEFORE our births Kussam who makes our fate Ordained us happy or unfortunate And wrote upon our brow and on our hands The signs that tell to him who understands Our Destiny decreed for good or ill. So pass the Wise bending to Allah s will Their lives into His mighty hands resigned.

One child is cherished one to hands unkind Is given one dies in life s first shining dawn One longs to die but Death when called upon Turns from the supplicating voice his ear One starves in poverty one is Amir And drives his elephant in lardly state One lives in love one girdled round with hate Dwells ever in a bitter world of strife One in the moment of this earthly life Is ruler sitting on a regal seat

And Allah changes all as He desires,
He is an artist whom His art inspires
This world the picture He is painting still.
But with his share of fate He gave man will
To fashion enroumstance by its control,
To make a path of healing for his soul,
To act to think, to feel aright until He knows his will as one with Allah s will.

TANSEN

Tansen, the singer, in great Akbar's Court Won great renown, through the Badshahi Fort His voice rang like the sound of silver bells And Akbar ravished heard The story tells How the King praised him, gave him many a gem, Called him chief jewel in his diadem. One day the singer sang the Song of Fire, The Deepak $R\hat{a}g$, and burning like a pyre His body burst into consuming flame. To cure his burning heart a maiden came And sang Malhar, the song of water cold, Till health returned, and comfort as of old "Mighty thy Teacher must be and divine," Great Akbar said, "magic indeed is thine, Learnt at his feet." Then happy Tansen bowed And said, "Beyond the world's ignoble crowd, Scorning its wealth, remote and far-away He dwells within a cave of Himalay" "Could I but see him once," desired the King, "Sit at his feet awhile, and listening Hear his celestial song, I would deny My state and walk in robes of poverty" Then said Tansen, "As you desire, Huzoor, Indeed 'twere better as a slave and poor To come, for he, lifted above the things

Of earth disdains to amg to earthly kings Long was the road and Akbar as a slave
Followed Tansen who rode towards the cave
High in the mountains At the singer a feet
They knelt and prayed with supplication sweet Towards thy shrine lo we have journeyed long

O Holy Master bless us with thy song!
Then Ostad won by their humility
Sang songs of peace and high felicity
The Malkous Raga all costatio rang
Till birds and beasts enchanted as he sang Gathered to hear O er Akbar a dreaming soul
He felt the waves of heavenly rapture roll,
But as he turned to speak his words of praise
Ostad had vanished from his wondering gaze

Tell me Tanson what theme this is that holds The soul enchanted and the heart enfolds In high delight and, when he knew the name

Tell me again he said, could you the same
Theme sing to lure my heart to paths untrod †

How difficult is the thorny way of strife

That man hath stumbled in since time began!

And in the tangled business of this life

How difficult to play the part of man!

When she decrees there should exist no more My humble cottage, through its broken walls, And cruelly drifting in the open door, The frozen rain of desolation falls.

O mad Desire, why dost thou flame and burn And bear my soul further and further yet To the Belovéd ? Then, why dost thou turn To bitter disappointment and regret?

Such light there gleams from the Belovéd's fac'e That every eye becomes her worshipper, And every mirror, looking on her grace, Desires to be the frame enclosing her. Unhappy lovers, slaves of cruel chance In this grum place of slaughter strange indeed Your joy to see unveiled her haughty glance That flashes like the sounitar of Ede

I SHALL not try to flee the sword of Death, Nor, fearing it, a watchful vigil keep, It will be nothing but a sigh, a breath, A turning on the other side to sleep

Through all the close entanglements of earth My spirit shaking off its bonds shall fare And pass, and rise in new unfettered birth, Escaping from this labyrinth of care

Within the mortal caravanserai
No rest and no abiding place I know,
I linger here for but a fleeting day,
And at the morrow's summoning I go.

What are these bonds that try to shackle me ?
Through all their intricate chains my way I find,

I travel like a wandering melody That floats untamed, untaken, on the wind.

From an unsympathetic world I flee
To you, your love and fellowship I crave,
O Singers dead, Sauda and Mushafi,
I lay my song as tribute on your grave

VOICE IN THE AIR

The vaulted roof opens. The guests feel that a Being is entering from above. They see nothing, but all hear a voice in the air.

High above the clouds in the Home of Light I

My days are passed in the peace of Great Under standing

For their welfare do I visit men in all corners of the earth At the command of the Mother I move up and down East and West showering the rays of Freedom upon all

The Mother is the Whole I am but a part

The Mother is the Opening Lotus I am but a single petal

The Mother is the Ocean of Honey I am but a thirsty bee Men call me Lord of the Sky and Father of the Heavens They know naught who speak thus

I am the Space and its all infilling Light and the sight in Man s eves which sees them both

I am the Sense whereby Man knows the Quarters I dwell in peace encompassing all these living orbs of light I know the secret of the Primal Song, the gods are all the offspring of a Song, by them unheard,

I keep the record of men's thoughts in my infinite

House of Sky;

From son to son I hold up the Mirror of Thought to each man's mind, to lead him across the shoreless Sea of Mirage;

Yet I do but the bidding of the Mother of Eternal

Power,

I am in all hearts, save only those where Love is not

The Being rises up through the open roof, and the guests hear his voice dying away in the far-off sky The vault of the Hall closes The southern door opens A Being enters They hear his voice.

I am the Friend of the Flowers—from one to another I bear sweet messages of love This all I do at the command of the Mother of

This all I do at the command of the Mother o

There stands the Mother tenderly smiling filling with sweetness the Quarters of the Heavens Yea like a spreading mountain pine Sho stands in the soft antumn twilight and it pleases Her that I play upon my reed for the comfort of all creatures that breathe

The light dies out leaving the Hall in darkness After a while a kind of murky earth-light diffuses itself over the lower part of the Hall. The guests their the sound of a mighty crying like the waiting of a sacked city in the far distance. A voice broken by sighs and groans speaks from below

I come Ye ask, Who art thou i Gods have not named me I call myself Humanity I dwell on land and in the seas I sweep through the air and the ether

I am man and woman and the intermediate one, I am the ape and the tiger and the lamb

I wander in the woods of dark continents as the savage cannibal I watch by the bedside of the sick in the home of mercy

I am ferocity in the beast of prey I am compassion in the heart of the mother

I devour my own offspring; I sacrifice myself to save others

I change—every moment, every season, every eon:

I fill the pages of my history with romances written in blood,

Out of my dreams of heaven I create this earth;

I wax strong and wage war to please Death;

I laugh at Death and hurl him into the flaming furnace of hell—and this I do to please my children

I enter the portals of Life with strong crying and with a sigh I bid farewell to Life

I am prophet, I am idiot,

I am king and shepherd and fisherman

I put my foot on the neck of kings and shepherds and fishermen and turn them into dust,

And with their dust do I besmear myself and madly dance over green meadows.

I am—what ye fear to think of me, I will be—what ye love to dream of me

But I will baffle all your fond expectations and all your clever calculations,

In a moment of infinite time I will take the whole world by the hand and lift it up to the heaven of my heart

I am the most erring of the High Mother's children, but one sure instinct I possess—I stand erect the moment I fall, and by the aid of the very obstacle that caused my fall do I rise again I sorrow not over my shortcomings and my sufferings

I hope—yet know that my hopes are too wild to be realised.

In a part of Space called the Corner of Pain I have made my home

I breathe the atmosphere of pain—I drink from the well of pain-I eat the fruits of the tree of pain-my sleep is troubled by the dream of pain

I love not Pain-Pain loves me

The whole history of my existence is a constant fleeing from this cruel lover of mine

I have prayed to God to be delivered from himhas He heard my prayer !

- I have worshipped a million lesser divinitiesnature-gods man-gods god-gods-through out the ages hoping to be relieved of painhave they saved me
- I have believed in prophets saviours saintshave they healed me 1

I have listened to philosophers scientists magicians-have they protected me !

Kings statesmen, law-givers have boldly pro claimed the gospel of peace and securityhave they not themselves plunged the poisoned dagger into my heart

I am old as Eternity-yet I feel not the burden of eternal years

- I am young as the babe of to-day—yet I am wise as all the hoary Bible-makers of all the races of the earth.
- I am one—I am many, I am spirit, ghost, man, animal, and tree yet my hidden life flows ever with passionate impetuosity towards the distant future above the heads of nations
- To me the least is not less than the greatest, in all I am their sensitiveness to pain—the pain of a perpetual new birth of cosmos or of chaos
- I am large, and my largeness moves me to face great pain for the avoiding of great pain;
- I am strong, and my strength hes in discovering the source of consolation even in the moment of suffering from suffering itself;
- I am inured to pain—so that I delight in excitement that brings pain and inflicts pain.
- Who brought this pain upon me? Had it been God-given, God would one day have taken it away?
- Had it been the gift of Nature, I would have revenged myself upon her, but I feel no enmity to Nature—I desire that she be endless, infinite, that I may ever conquer her,
- I desire to be charmed by her—yet to be her master, I wonder, shall I ever wish to end this play?

Deeming myself the mother of my pain I seek the aid of floods and earthquakes war and pestilence and famme to bring destruction on myself hut ever by a mysterious magic I rise from my own sahes and live again and after my resurrection sitting in the dawn light by the waveless occan Psyche comes and whispers to my heart 'Not thou, O sweet Humanity, art cause of thine own pain!

And I muse If I be the father of my sufferings how can I desire to live again? How can I inflict pain upon myself? How can I con struct machinery for my own torture?

I know that my nature is rooted in contradiction have I perhaps sought to grow at the cost of happiness and peace?

Bright Powers in the heavens are watching over my mysterious destiny. Have they lauded me as good and true and beautiful? Have they condemned me as bad and false and ugly? Who will say whether I am developing anght? Who will say whether the daily use to which I am constrained to put my life is not frustrating the Eternal Pur pose?

I am left alone with my unforeseeing understanding and my ever forward-springing untamable energy My knowledge embraces not the whole reality. Perchance my sensitiveness to pain has sprung from my limited uncomprehending understanding True, in my own eyes I grow from ugliness to beauty, from ignorance to knowledge, from slavery to freedom, from sin to holiness I make progress in culture and civilisation—but I rise to the zenith only to descend to the nadir

Henceforth I will seek new and inward space for my progress In the coming age I will seek to bore a tunnel in the spirit, to find an inner path to the Divinity of my Heart. But I will not destroy the bridges which I have built during the past ages, linking this earth with the distant divinity of suns and moons and stars

I will be free, glorious, and immortal

The Voice ceases. Śrī Ānanda Āchārya.

ALL this is rhythm. May-fields, child-hearts, evening skies, Grow corn and wisdom and stars By the throb of rhythm, And Muses from the Milky Way Nightly visit The sleeping poet's downy pillow By the law of rhythm; And angels bring him faces

Flushed with morning s rose
Tinted with even s quiet
By the sweet impulse of rhythm
Wait O soul!
Outside thy door upon the green,
Heaven stands expectant Waiting to be ushered in
By Rhythm
Just now—or perchance to-merrow

Śri Ananda Achārya From Usariba

FRIEND dwell thou within my ruby lotus heart of dreams

Friend, see thyself in the diamond mirror of my heart of hopes

Friend sport with me in the garden walks of my heart fringed with everlastings

Friend aleep thou on the shore of the song throated ocean of my heart

Friend, shine in me like sunlight in the heart of a rose-bud of jade

LOVE'S SAMĀDHI 1

AH, Love, I sink in the timeless sleep,
Sink in the timeless sleep,
One Image stands before my eyes,
And thrills my bosom's deep
One Vision bathes in radiant light
My spirit's palace-halls,
All stir of hand, all throb of brain,
Quivers, and sinks, and falls
My soul fares forth, no fetters now
Chain me to this world's shore Sleep! I would sleep! 'In pity spare;
Let no man wake me more!

Nārāyan Vāman Tilak.

A CRADLE SONG

HUSH thee, hush thee, baby Christ,
Lord of all mankind,—
Thou the happy lullaby
Of my mind

Hush thee, hush thee, Jesus, Lord, Stay of all that art,— Thou the happy lullaby
Of my heart.

¹ Samādh is the mystic's "ecstasy," in which all consciousness of the material world is lost and the soul is face to face with the Real

Hush thee hush thee home of peace— Lo I Love lying there!— Thou the happy lullaby Of my care

Hush thee hush thee Soul of mine Setting all men free— Thou the happy lullaby Of the whole of me

THE WAY OF POVERTY

Thou hadst no servants to attend on Thee
Then why this pomp of household state for me?
Coarso fare and scanty was Thy portion, Lord
Then why for me this richly inrnished board?
Thou hadst not where to lay Thy head to rest
Then why should I of mansions be possessed?
Ah hapless I! What is this tyranny?
How dost Thou laugh and make a mock of me!
Ah take from me this burden that doth bow
My head I blest ocean of all love art Thou!
I speak in anger Lord yet if Thou too
Reject my prayer what can Thy servant do?
Sauth Dāsa Christ upon Thy pallet-bed
Grant me a little space to lay my head

Nārāyan Vāman Tīlak

THE LAST PRAYER

Lay me within Thy lap to rest,
Around my head Thine arm entwine,
Let me gaze up into Thy face,
O Father-Mother mine!

So let my spirit pass with joy,
Now at the last, O Tenderest '
Saith Dāsa, Grant Thy wayward child
This one, this last request
Nārāyan Vāman Tilak.

UNION WITH CHRIST

As the moon and its beams are one, So that I be one with Thee, This is my prayer to Thee, my Lord, This is this beggar's plea

I would snare Thee and hold Thee ever,
In loving wifely ways ,
I give Thee a daughter's welcome,
I give Thee a sister's praise.

As words and their meaning are linked, Serving one purpose each, Be Thou and I so knit, O Lord, And through me breathe Thy speech. O be my soul a mirror clear That I may see Thee there, Dwell in my thought my speech my life Making them glad and fair

Take Thou this body O my Christ Dwell as its soul within
To be an instant separate
I count a deadly sin

PEACE

It is the hour of sunset and the sky
Is robed in purple as a lovely bride
With ruby lips and veil thrown half ande
Waiting for her sweet lord with longing eye
The air is fresh and fragrant and the sea
In smiling joy its boundless bosom heaves
With ringing music of the rising waves
And far from here its weary whisper leaves
The broken coho of a world that raves
Its murmur hushed in new born notes of glee

Lulled by the laughter of the sky and earth The heart forgets her sorrow and suspends Her breath in silent rapture and descends Upon the soul the vision of its birth. Immeasurable waters! and the sky Immeasurable! and this wondrous light

In rainbow smiles of India, all around— Resting and rocking and rolling in delight, And swelling with the mirth of many a sound That fills the ocean's ears unceasingly

And now the mantle of approaching night
Falls gently o'er the drowsy eyes of day;
The roseate glow of evening melts away,
Softly beyond the western waves, to white
Now o'er the earth a veil of mystery
In silver silence all around is spread,
And not a sound is heard or sight is seen Except the lingering echoes hither led
Of boatmen's shouts, and distant lights between The mingling bosoms of the sky and sea

The moon hath risen, and the stars appear,
And heaven is watching with the eyes of light;
And in my heart a newer hope is bright
With varied splendours of the atmosphere
The mind is hushed and all its motions cease
Of wayward fancy and unquiet thought,
And in the happy island of the soul
Awakes a joy in radiance unforgot—
Which o'er the world's tumultuous uncontrol Doth smile, and softly whisper, "Here is Peace!"

A PLAY IN THREE ACTS

By L. CRANMER-BYNG

This is the drama of April played in Cintra one thousand years ago. With sunshine and laughter and the whispering of a name among the lemon groves the brief day passes, and with tears it fades into the Lusitanian twilight

LONDON JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET, W 1.
